MADEMOISELLE IXE.

This cleverly written and exciting novel well to printed complete in this single the story of a young Russian girl who conterately plans to murder a man who has oppressed her people, and who carries out her plan. The character is drawn in most admirable fashion. The young sthilist, who with a fixed porpose enters in English family as governess, grows upon the reader as she does upon the quiet English people who have employed her. The tragle ending of her career caves her triends to real life and in the poor more devoted to her than possible. ti- a story to make many girls wish that they had something bigger on hand than dresors and bathing suits or silly young men to occupy their minds.

This remarkable work will interest all different who have brains that work. It is interesting because it is the product or careful thought on the part of a very young girl, because it stands for the value of the Greeley blood, and also because the father of the gifted young person was once well known to all American as the handsomest man in the world. It is a child a creation, but not a childish one. It deals with love and human vanity in very great abundance, and introduces Greeley and the handsomest man in the world as well.

The Aldermen Will Probably Square Meegan's Bill Monday.

The mandamus proceedings brought against the Brooklyn Board of Aldermen by the executors of Patrick Meegan, of Williamsburg, was adjourned in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, this morning until Tuesday.

Meegan secured the contract to widen North Second street, and just before his death presented his bill to the Board of Aldermen. They requised to recognize it. His executors, Michael Meegan and William II. Hamilton, secured judgment or $5.241.45 against the Aldermen, which they followed by mandamus proceedings.

It is understood that the adjournment was had in order to give the Aldermen an opportunity to square the bill at their meeting on Monday.
